With the establishment of the Governmental Research Center as an independent division of the University of Kansas, a systematic program of research, publication, and service has been developed and put into operation. Believing that an informed and intelligent citizenry is the foundation of a successful democracy, the Center is engaged in searching for and presenting information regarding our governmental institutions. Believing also that these facts should be easily and readily accessible to the public, a comprehensive publication program is under way.

Your public library is probably among the 150 such institutions acting as official depositories for all publications of the Governmental Research Center. If you are unable to secure Center publications from your public library, write to the Director who will send you the publication you need and will invite your library to become an official depository.

As a part of its services to the public, the Center is equipped to answer public inquiries concerning the political institutions of the State of Kansas. Publications are available to all interested citizens. Inquiries or requests for information regarding any of the publications should be addressed to the Director, Governmental Research Center, Strong Annex A, University of Kansas, Lawrence.

Acknowledgements

The work of many minds and many hands is required for a project of this scope. One person could not do it alone. At the advisory and decision making level the help and guidance of professors Ethan P. Allen, Clarence J. Hein and Rhoten A. Smith was invaluable. To numerous graduate students goes the credit for the hard work of copying, checking, and verifying all of the figures involved. They are Walt Butcher, Albert Dimmitt, John Dimsdale, Edward Graham, Theodore Heim, Donald Hopkins, Robert James, Jack Jevons, Robert Kennedy, Robert Knutson, Shirley Linn, Ruth Nettleton, Carroll Pickens, Sami Saliba, Robert Skinner, John Stretcher, Ruth Sturtevant, Mary Sullivan and Cloyce Wiley. We are deeply grateful to them all.

Introduction

Fundamental to the democratic process is the election for at such a time the citizen passes judgment upon those who wish to represent him. Does the citizen, in exercising this sovereign power, form discernible patterns of behavior, patterns which might be analyzed for their predictive value?

Among both students and practitioners of politics there has developed an increasing interest in the study of election behavior. Without the basic data, however, such an interest can result only in "speculation" or "rule of thumb" decisions.

It is hoped that this volume will contribute the basic data necessary to a clearer knowledge of our electoral behavior in Kansas. The volume contains the county by county election statistics for all elections to national office from 1859 through 1956. No attempt is made, in the present volume, to analyze the data. Here are the figures from which citizens, practicing politicians, scholars or others may draw the information necessary to secure a better understanding of the various facts of voting behavior in Kansas.

Future volumes will continue the reporting of election statistics and will present data on state general and primary elections. The Governmental Research Center will also present, from time to time, analytical studies of electoral behavior in Kansas. This is undertaken so that an informed electorate may strengthen democracy in operation.

NATIONAL ELECTIONS IN KANSAS:

A Note On Methodology

Kansas Votes, National Elections, 1859-1956 is a statistical presentation of party voting in Kansas from its beginning as a state.

For each of the nationally elected officers—President, Senator, and United States Representative—the following election facts are presented, on a county basis, for each election year from 1859 to 1956:

The total vote

The vote cast for the Democratic candidate

The Democratic percentage of the total vote

The vote cast for the Republican candidate

The Republican percentage of the total vote

The total vote cast for all other candidates

The percentage of the total vote received by the "other" candidates

The Democratic percentage of the two-party vote

The Republican percentage of the two-party vote

The plurality of the Republican (or Democratic) candidate over the Democratic (or Republican) candidate

In addition, for the years from 1920 through 1956 the estimated number of eligible voters is included, along with the percentage which the total number of votes is of the estimated number of eligible voters.

The plurality is presented in terms of the Democratic and Republican parties although in several elections, particularly those between 1890 and 1900, and 1912, when the Peoples Party and the Progressive Party were strong, one of these two minor parties was actually second in strength. The plurality vote was handled in this way primarily for two reasons. One is that it is planned to do further work on election statistics by means of electronic computations, and it is intended that the material presented here be comparable to future work. Electronic computation of pluralities appears to lend itself most readily to the use of two specified variables, and the two most frequent parties in first and second place are the Republican and Democratic. In addition, this is the method used by Richard Scammon in America Votes, and it is hoped that the material in this volume will be comparable to and will complement the material presented there.

The names of the minor parties and the names of the candidates of all parties are presented in a separate list at the end of the tables of election results for each office. These lists are found on page 54, page 92 and page 210.

For many years the party vote cast for President was actually cast for the individual electors. In such cases the total Democratic, Republican, or minor party vote given is the vote cast for the party elector who polled the largest county-wide vote on his party ticket.

Congressional Elections at Large

The Congressional elections for 1872 and 1882 provided some difficulties for tabular presentation since in these years in addition to the congressmen elected by district several were elected at large. In 1872 three congressmen were elected at large and in 1882 four were elected in this manner.

The material for these elections is presented in two ways. In the first table, the vote for all Republican candidates is totaled, as is that for all Democratic candidates, and for all "other" candidates. These totals are added together, and the Republican, Democratic, and "other" percentages of the grand total are obtained. These figures are presented on a county-by-county basis. While these percentages are not exactly comparable to those presented for candidates elected on a district-by-district basis, they are included because they appear to have some value in making rough comparisons. The plurality vote presented for the at-large elections is the total plurality of the Republican candidates over the total vote for the Democratic candidates. Second, the actual vote cast for each candidate of each party is listed.

Kansas did not become settled in regard to the number, names, and boundaries of its 105 counties until after the election of 1892.

The annexation of Garfield county by Finney county in 1893 culminated more than three decades, since attaining statehood, of county growth and realignment in Kansas. During this period only the counties in the northeast and east central sections of the state remained as we know them today.

Many counties made their appearance during this period, functioned for a relatively short period of time, then disappeared either through change of name, annexation, or the creation of two or more counties in the territory previously occupied by only one county. Some of these counties, such as Seward county, eventually reappeared in other parts of the state. At the time of the Presidential election of 1864, Seward county occupied parts of the territory now occupied by Elk and Chautauqua counties in Southeastern Kansas. By the election of 1868, Seward county had disappeared and its territory was occupied by Howard county, which eventually gave way to Elk and Chautauqua counties. By the election of 1876, Seward county had reappeared, this time in the southwestern part of the state. Although it experienced subsequent expansion and contraction of its boundary lines, the boundaries of Seward county are substantially the same today as at the time of its re-establishment prior to the election of 1876.

While Seward county is an extreme example, its history illustrates the fact that caution must be used in comparing county-by-county election results prior to the 1894 election. Care should be used to insure that any analysis undertaken makes allowances for the variations in county boundaries and names prior to 1894.*

Sources of Election Data

There were five sources of information used for this study. The party vote cast per county was derived from two sources: the official reports of the Secretary of State and Admire's Political and Legislative Handbook for Kansas, by W. W. Admire, published by George W. Crane and Co., at Topeka, Kansas, 1891. For the early year, 1859-1866, the Secretary of State's Reports were not complete so that Admire's Handbook was used as the source of election figures for those years. From 1868 through 1876 voting information was available through both sources and each was used as a check against the other. From 1878 on the Biennial Reports of the Secretary of State were used exclusively. Admire's Handbook is considered a semi-official source of election figures for the early years of Kansas history. At the front of the book this authentication may be found:

STATE OF KANSAS
OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE
TOPEKA, JANUARY 14, 1891

To Whom It May Concern:

This is to certify, that the Kansas Election tables contained in Admire's Political and Legislative Handbook for Kansas for 1891, have been compiled from official returns on file in my office, and are correct, as I verily believe.

Signed:

WILLIAM HIGGINS
SECRETARY OF STATE

Nevertheless, whenever possible Admire's statistics have been checked against the official reports of the Secretary of State and against other compilations such as that by W. Dean Burnham, Presidential Ballots 1836-1892.

During the years 1892, 1896, and 1900 in Kansas there was much combining of the Democratic party with the Peoples or Populist party. For these elections it was necessary to delve through the Topeka Daily Capital for information as to which candidate the Kansas Democratic party was supporting. In 1892 Kansas Democrats, in convention, decided to accept the Peoples party slate of electors. Therefore, although Cleveland was the national Democratic candidate, his name did not appear on the Kansas ballot, and the Kansas Democratic party supported instead the Peoples candidate, Weaver. In 1896 the Democrats and Populists again fused, this time in support of the Democratic national ticket. In 1900 the Populist party split, part of it supporting the Democrat, Bryan. The other part, a smaller group of "Middle of the Road Populists" supported Warton Barker. As a result of these fusions between the two parties, in several of the tables the Democratic and Peoples party vote has been combined and recorded under the Democratic party column. In each instance that this has been done a footnote explanation is provided.

Estimated Eligible Vote

The estimated eligible vote is based upon a breakdown of population figures obtained from the United States decennial census and the annual census reports of the Kansas State Board of Agriculture. Many problems were encountered in the attempt to present an estimate of the eligible vote over such a long period of years. The decisions made, and the procedures followed in arriving at these estimates, call for a rather lengthy and detailed explanation so that anyone making use of the eligible vote figures herein presented will fully understand what they represent.

In determining the estimated eligible vote for the years from 1920 through 1950 the basic unit used was the United States census figures for the total number of citizens twenty-one years of age and over in each Kansas county.

Since election data are presented for the entire period of Kansas statehood, an attempt was made to estimate the number of eligible voters for each county beginning in 1859. However, the collection and analysis of population data for the years before 1920 revealed so many statistical problems that it was felt that justification of their accuracy would be difficult.

Among the problems which arose was the fact that in the years 1880 and 1890 the census data did not contain citizenship figures on a county basis. During this period only male citizens and male aliens with first citizenship papers who were twenty-one and over were eligible to vote. Since the citizenship factor was not available there was no practical way to avoid including the ineligible non-citizen in our voting estimates.

In the years 1900 and 1910 the proper breakdown of figures was available from the census data. However, the percentage of eligible voters actually voting during these decades ran very high in nearly all of the counties, sometimes exceeding one hundred per cent. This result threw serious doubt either upon the accuracy of the census data or on the degree to which the eligibility rules were enforced.

The period between 1910 and 1920 presented an additional special problem. It was during this decade that the definition of an eligible voter in the Kansas Constitution underwent several changes. From 1910 through 1912 suffrage rights remained limited to the male citizen twenty-one and over and to the alien male twenty-one and over with his first citizenship papers. In the 1912

*For those who are interested, a series of maps showing the boundaries and names of counties may be found in Walt Butcher, Presidential Election Returns for Kansas, 1864-1952, Emporia State Research Studies, Vol. 5, No. 1, September 1956. It should be noted that in the early years not all of the organized counties sent election returns to the Secretary of State.

November election, an amendment to the Kansas Constitution was passed extending the voting privilege to females twenty-one and over who were either citizens or aliens with first papers. In November of 1918 article 5 of the Kansas Constitution was again changed, this time to read, "Every citizen of the United States of the age of twenty-one years and upwards—shall be deemed a qualified voter." Although separate methods were worked out to project an estimated vote for the years 1912, 1914, 1916, and 1918 which seemed to include only the proper figures applicable to each of these years, a number of estimating procedures had to be employed in the inclusion and exclusion of the various population groups. These seemed somewhat too arbitrary to be justified. For all of these reasons it was decided that in the interest of accuracy it would be best to begin our estimate of the eligible vote with the year 1920.

Beginning the estimates with the year 1920, however, did not eliminate all problems of classification of population or of changes in election rules. For the years 1920 and 1930 the census data show figures for the number of persons twenty-one years of age and over under the following groupings:

Males and females 21 years of age and over:

Native white

Foreign born white:

Naturalized

First papers

Alien

Unknown (citizenship not reported)

Negro

Other races (American Indian, Mexican, Chinese, Japanese, Filipino, Hindu, all others)

By 1940 and 1950 the census classifications of persons twenty-one years of age and over were greatly reduced in number. The separate breakdown for males and females twenty-one and over were as follows:

Native—all races

Foreign born—naturalized (all races)

Foreign born—alien (all races)

Citizenship not reported—(all races)

Some facts related to these changes in census data should be noted. In 1924 Congress granted citizenship to all American Indians. Persons belonging to other races formerly listed in the "other races" group were citizens if native born and aliens if foreign born, unless they belonged to races which, under our laws, were privileged to become naturalized citizens and had taken advantage of this privilege. In this case such persons would simply be listed with the foreign born naturalized group. Foreign born persons belonging to races not so privileged (Chinese and Mexican until 1943, Japanese, Hindu and Filipino until 1952, when all restrictions on naturalization were removed) would be listed with the foreign born alien group.

These changes in the requirements for citizenship and the change in census classification did not particularly affect the estimates except for the year 1930 and for the period between 1920 and 1930.

For the year 1920 United States census figures were used which gave all of the white and Negro citizens, male and female, twenty-one years of age and over, both native-born and naturalized, for each Kansas county. All persons listed in the "other races" classification and all of the group listed under the classification, "citizenship unknown," were omitted from our estimates. The "unknown" classification was omitted in all estimates of eligible voters.

The use of the "other races" classification was varied. In the years 1940 and 1950, as has been pointed out, this classification was dropped by the Census Bureau and the figures given for each county automatically included all members of these "other races" who were citizens (native or naturalized) and placed any who were non-citizens in the alien classification. Therefore, the number of eligible voters for these two census years is taken directly from the census figures given for males and females twenty-one and over who were either native born or naturalized citizens.

By using the described groups of figures on a county basis for the years 1920, 1940, and 1950 the total figure for the number of persons eligible to vote in the state agreed with the total state figure given in the Statistical Abstract of the United States, 1956, as, "All Citizens of Voting Age" for these years.

In 1930, since the "other races" were still grouped separately, the procedure outlined above for 1920 was again followed and the "other races" group was excluded from the estimate. This resulted in a state total of eligible voters which came to 1,103,667, a figure 2,371 less than the 1,106,038 given by the Statistical Abstract as the 1930 total of "All Citizens of Voting Age."

A letter of inquiry addressed to the U. S. Bureau of the Census brought an explanation of this difference from Mr. Howard G. Brunsman, Chief of the Population Division of the Bureau of the Census. For 1920, both in the original census figures and in the 1956 Statistical Abstract figures, the Bureau of the Census determined the total of potential voters for Kansas by using the same statistical groupings used in this study. Their figures included all native born white persons twenty-one years of age and over, all naturalized white persons twenty-one and over, and all Negroes twenty-one and over. Omitted were all persons twenty-one and over listed in the "other races" group and all persons whose citizenship was unknown. In 1930 the Bureau of the Census continued to present all county figures for persons twenty-one and over under the same classifications used in 1920, yet in Table 14, Chapter 8, Vol. II, page 419 of the 1930 Census, referred to by Mr. Brunsman, the potential voters for the state as a whole are presented under the following categories:

Native born:

White	—	1,007,927
Negro	—	42,872
Mexican	—	603	} other races
Indian	—	1,281
Chinese	—	20
Japanese	—	2
All others	—	75
Total	—	1,052,780

Naturalized:

White	—	52,776
Negro	—	47
Mexican	—	435	(other races)
Total	—	53,258
Complete total	—	1,106,038

These groupings give the total of 1,106,038 used in the Statistical Abstract and differ by 2,371 from the total derived by adding the county figures presented in Table 13, Vol. III, Part I, page 841 of the 1930 U. S. Census because, as Mr. Brunsman points out, they exclude 45 foreign born Negroes not naturalized and include 2,416 persons of the "other races" group who are either native born or naturalized citizens. These citizens were excluded from the county calculations because at this level the census figures do not indicate citizenship for this "other races" group. They are simply presented as a total unit for each county. The same is true of the Negro group. In the census tabulation presenting the number of Negroes twenty-one and over at the county level (Table 13, Vol. III, Part I), no indication is given that these persons are anything other than native born American Negroes. Hence there is no way of knowing the county residence of the 45 foreign born Negroes. Nor, of course, is there any means of determining the allotment per county of the 2,416 citizens among the "other races" group. It can be determined, however, that 2,416 is 22.01 per cent of the 10,970 total number of persons in the state twenty-one years of age and over who, in 1930, were classed in the "other races" group and that 45 is 00.1 per cent of the total of 42,964 Negroes twenty-one and over in the state.

Since it has been considered desirable to have the county figures for 1930 add up to the same state total as that given by the Census Bureau in the Statistical Abstract, the original 1930 county census figures have been adjusted by adding to the total number of citizens twenty-one and over in each county a number equal to twenty-two per cent of the total number of persons in each county classed in the "other races" group. For example, the total of eligible voters in Allen county, excluding all of the "other races" group was 13,142. There were 59 persons in the "other races" classification for Allen County. Twenty-two per cent of fifty-nine, (13) was added which placed the final estimate of the Allen county eligible voters at 13,155.

By adding twenty-two per cent of the "other races" group to each county, the adjusted total for the state comes to 1,106,168, or 130 more than the Statistical Abstract total of 1,106,038. This figure, although still not in exact agreement, brings both the state total and the totals per county much closer to the census figure for citizens twenty-one years of age and over than our former figure of 1,103,667. This is a variation of one one-hundredths of one per cent. There are two causes for the slight distortion of 130 above the U. S. Census and Statistical Abstract totals. First there is a mathematical deviation of 85 resulting from fractional remainders in the multiplication process, and second a distortion of 45 contributed by the fact that the foreign born Negroes were not eliminated. It was felt that to subtract 00.1 per cent from the Negro population in each of the one hundred and five Kansas counties would only have resulted in further fractional distortion. Without the exact distribution of the number of citizens from these two groups on a county basis some error would appear in any statistical effort at correction. Furthermore it seems likely that the original census data may vary as between counties at least to the degree of one one-hundredth of a per cent. The adjustment method here described brings the 1930 state and county potential voter figures very close to those reported by the Bureau of the Census. With the small degree of distortion which exists fully explained, it did not seem advisable to attempt further refinement of the estimates.

There was some question as to whether the 1920 U. S. Census county figures should be adjusted in the same manner as those for 1930. The decision was against it, primarily because the Bureau of the Census itself had not felt it necessary to separate the citizens from the non-citizens in either the "other races" or Negro groupings in making its estimate of the number of potential voters for 1920 as presented in the 1956 Statistical Abstract. To have adjusted the Kansas figures, it was felt would have made the Kansas figures less easily comparable with the 1920 census figures readily available for other states.

Estimated Eligible Vote For Non-Decennial Census Years

Use of the United States census figures presented the problem of finding a satisfactory method for estimating the voting population for those years in between the decennial census dates. This problem might have been avoided by the use of the population figures presented biennially in the Report of the Kansas State Board of Agriculture. It was felt, however, that the United States census figures would be more comparable on a national basis and that this factor of comparability with other states outweighed the weaknesses which any system of estimating population changes must involve.

The system used for this purpose is based upon the assumption that any population change which occurred between two given census years continued evenly and in the same direction. This, of course, often may not be true. An increase of 10,000 in the Kansas population in 1940 over that of 1930 may have occurred evenly within each two-year period, or it may actually have fallen off in 1932 and 1934 and then have moved upward in 1938. Since United States census data is not available on such year-to-year fluctuations, the easiest assumption to make is one of a regular, even increase (or decrease) in population from one decennial census year to the next. The procedure used was based on this assumption. The difference between the figures given for two consecutive census years, for example 1940 and 1950, was determined, and this difference divided by five so as to allot an equal rate of increase or decrease in population for each intervening two-year period. Whenever a fraction remained it was distributed in reverse fashion; for example a fraction of three-fifths would mean that one additional person would be added or subtracted, as the case might be, to or from the years 1950, 1948, and 1946.

In every ten-year period involved, except that between 1920 and 1930, all of the factors used in calculation were completely comparable. As has already been explained, the 1920 census figures completely excluded any persons classed in the "other races" group while the 1930 figures included twenty-two per cent of the persons in this group. Also it was not until 1924 that the American Indians, who in Kansas constituted the major part of the "other races" group, were permitted to vote. Under the system of estimated equal population changes for each two-year period this means that the estimate for 1922, a year in which the Indians could not vote, will be a little high because it was derived by finding the difference between the 1920 and the 1930 figure, with the latter containing twenty-two per cent of the "other races" group. On the other hand the estimate for the years 1924, 1926, and 1928, years when the Indians had the franchise, might be slightly low because included in the estimate was the 1920 figure which did not contain any of the "other races" group. It was belived better to permit this degree of distortion and to point it out, than to attempt to make an adjustment.

It should also be pointed out that no allowance was made for the various groups of people who, under the Kansas Constitution, are disqualified from voting. These groups include persons under guardianship; persons who are mentally incompetent or insane; persons convicted of a felony or dishonorably discharged from the service of the United States, unless restored to civil rights or reinstated; persons guilty of defrauding the government or of giving or receiving a bribe, or of offering to do the same; and persons who have ever voluntarily borne arms against the government of the United States, or who have in any manner voluntarily aided or abetted in the attempted overthrow of said government.

These groups of persons, who technically should be eliminated from any accounting of the eligible voters, were not eliminated, primarily because of the lack of any single reliable source from which such statistics could be obtained. Also, with the exception of certain counties such as Leavenworth, where the state and federal prisons are located and Shawnee, Miami, and Pawnee where the three state mental hospitals are located, the percentage of such persons to the total number of eligible citizens should be negligible.

It is also possible that counties such as Leavenworth, Shawnee, Miami, and Pawnee with large institutional populations, Geary with a large army installation, and Douglas and Riley with large student bodies, might have a larger number of persons for whom citizenship was not reported. Thus, the figures for these counties may well be distorted in two directions, both by the inclusion of some constitutionally disqualified citizens and by the exclusion of a large number of persons grouped in the citizenship unknown classification.

Estimated Eligible Voters For 1952-1956

Estimates of the potential voting population for 1952, 1954, and 1956 require a separate explanation since the lack of a 1960 census figure called for a different approach.

For these years the annual state census, published by the State Board of Agriculture, was used. It gives only total population figures for each county. It should be noted that frequently the state agricultural census figures per county vary from and are usually slightly higher than the total population figures per county given in the United States Decennial Census.

The procedure used was as follows:

- 1) The per cent that the 1950 eligible vote figures for any given county was of the total population for that county in 1950 was determined.

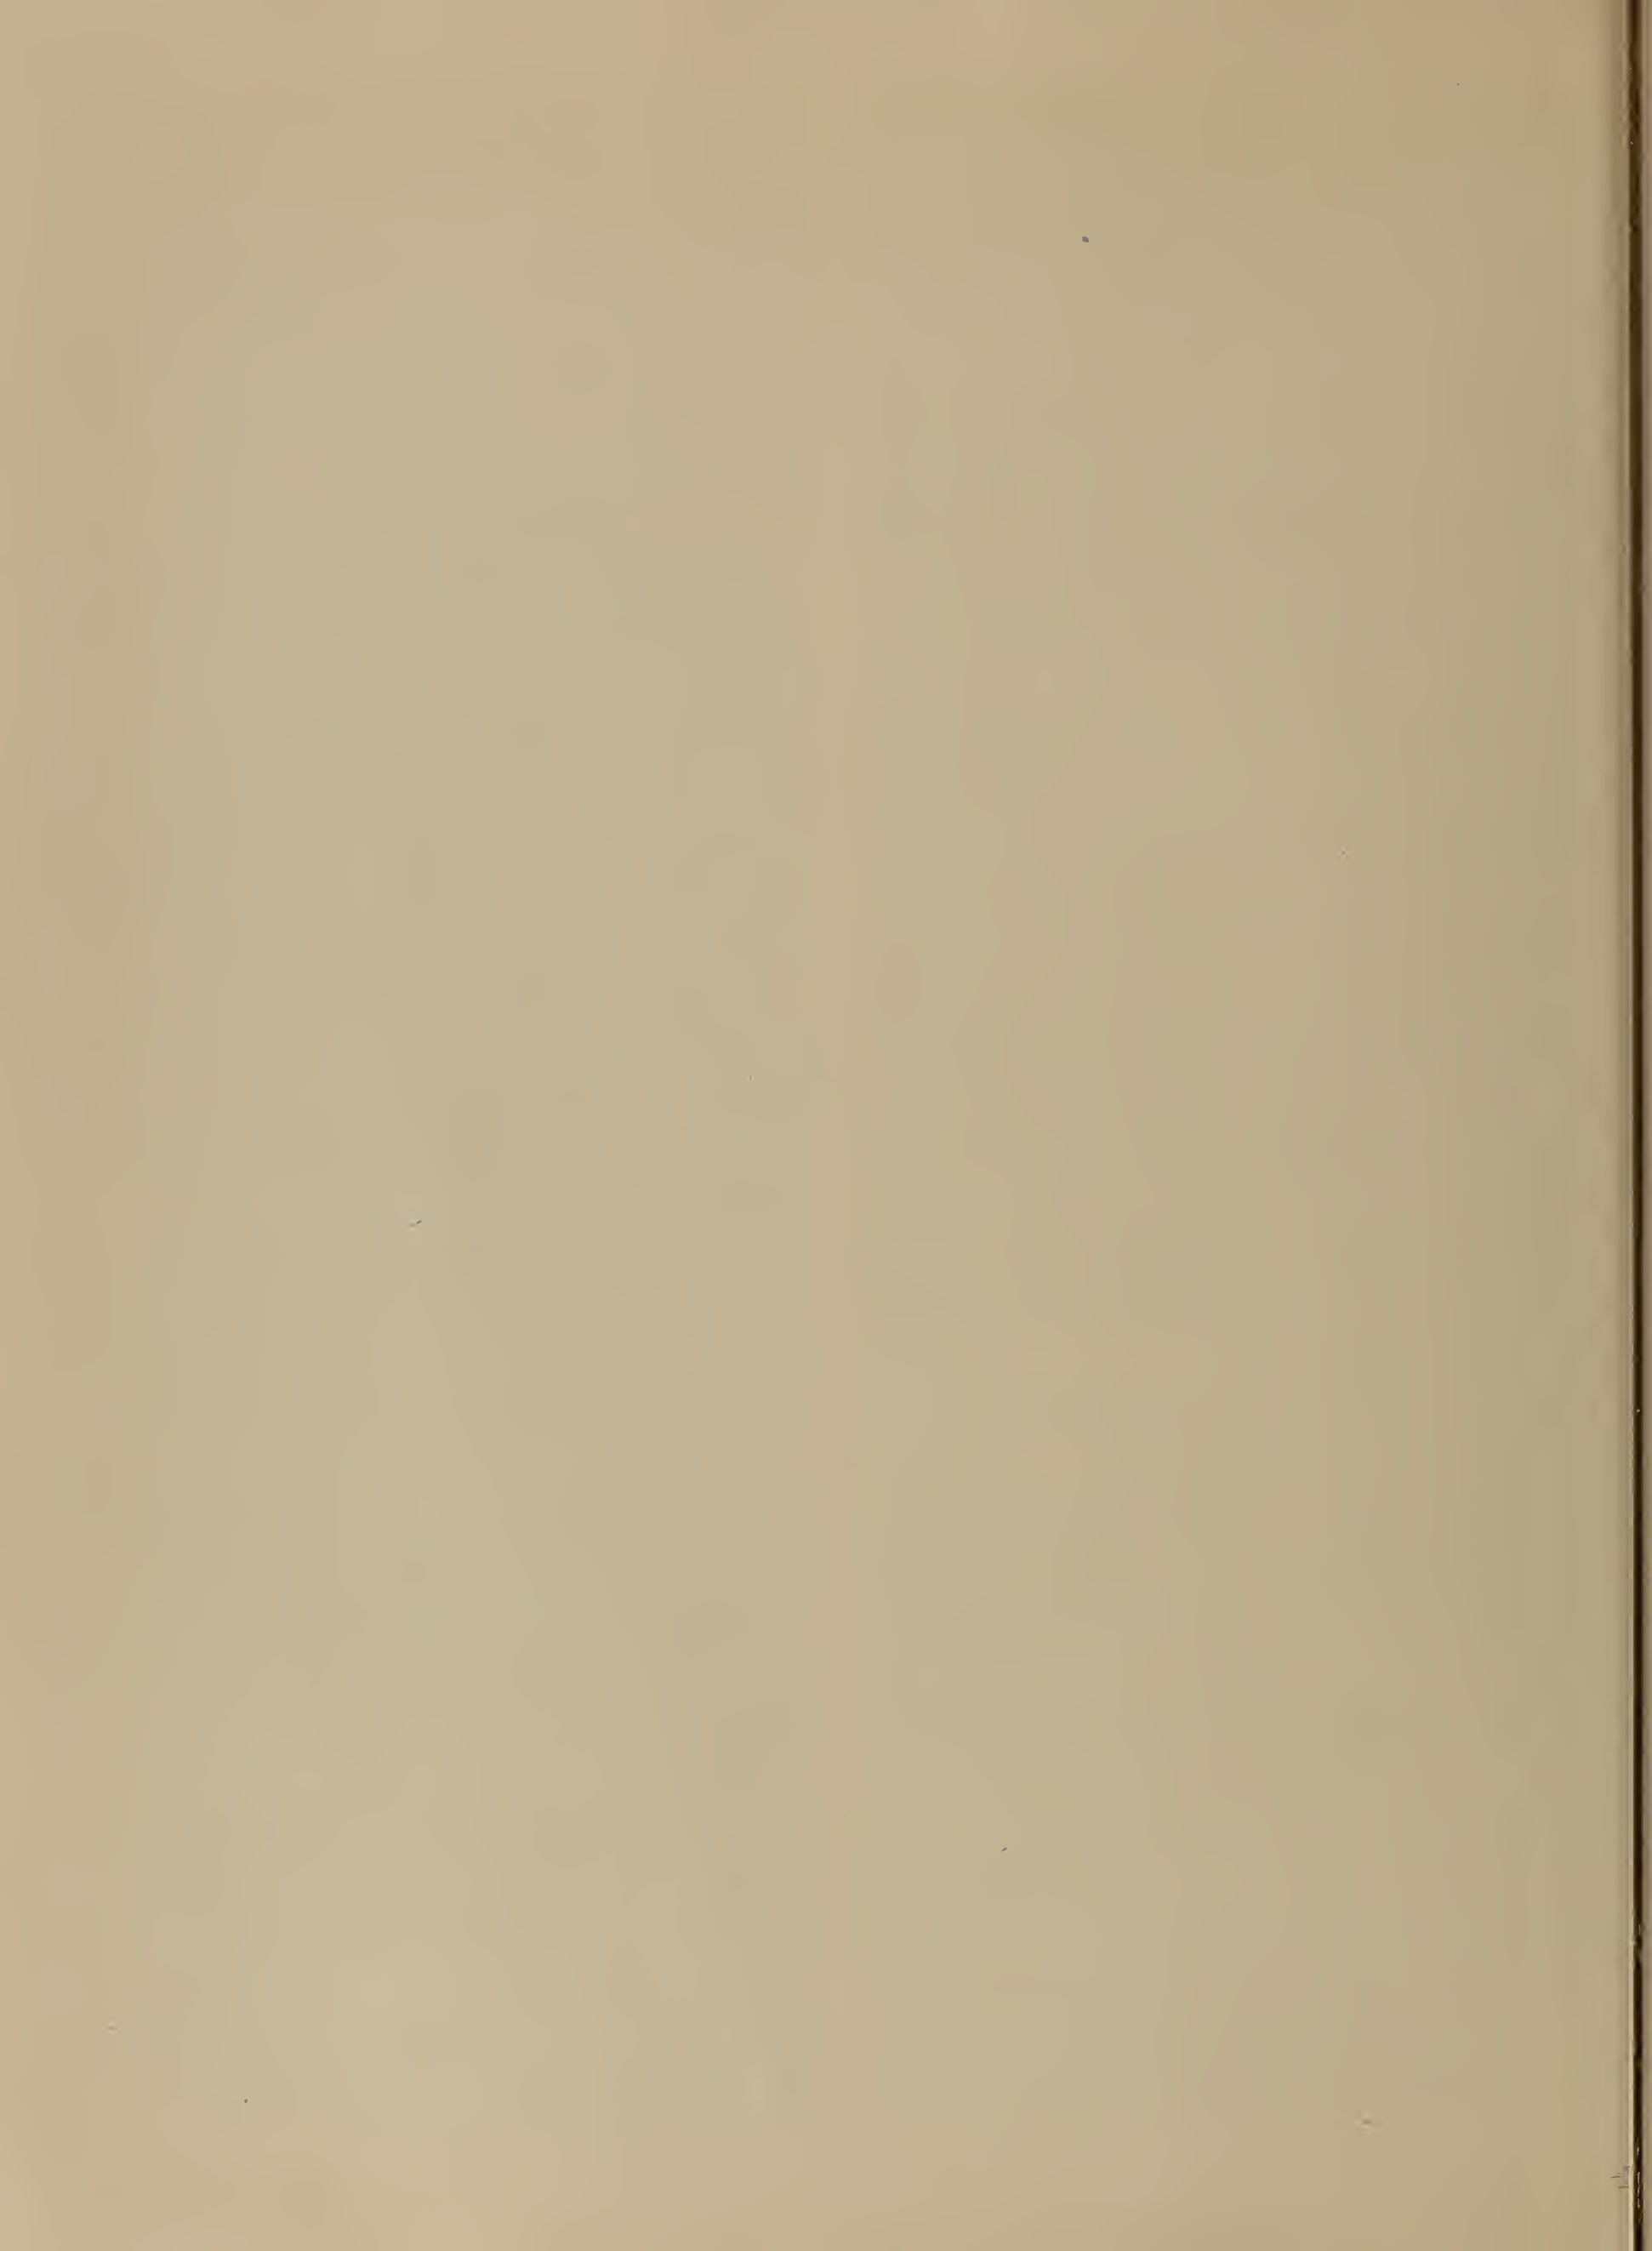

- 2) It was then assumed that these percentage ratios per county remained constant for the years 1952, 1954, and 1956.

- 3) The total population figure for each county for the years 1952, 1954, and 1956, as taken from the state census, was then multiplied by the per cent that the 1950 eligible vote was of the total 1950 population per county. The resultant figure is used as the estimated eligible vote for each county in the 1952, 1954, and 1956 elections.

It is obvious that this procedure is potentially subject to greater error than that used for the period 1920 through 1950. Comparisons of the estimated eligible vote given for 1952, 1954, and 1956 with other figures should be made with this inaccuracy in mind.

Clearly no figure in this presentation of Kansas election statistics can be considered absolute. However, all estimates have been carefully explained, and the figures presented should be useful as rough measurements of the factor they represent.

Human error of course, is always a factor which cannot be overlooked when so many computations and the copying of figures are required. In this study all such computations were done by hand, rather than electronically. Every computation and each copying of figures in this presentation was triple checked, yet it is always possible for errors to creep in. If any errors are discovered by the readers and users of this material the Governmental Research Center would greatly appreciate being informed of them.

¹ The name of Davis county was changed to Geary county in 1889, and in 1893 Garfield county was annexed to Finney county, bringing the number of counties to 105 where it has since remained.

² The Democratic and Populist parties joined together in Kansas in 1892 and supported the Populist candidate, Weaver. Cleveland, the Democratic candidate, was not on the ballot in Kansas. For the purpose of computing pluralities and percentages, the vote for Weaver has been considered to be the Democratic party vote in Kansas; therefore, comparisons between these statistics and those of a normal Democratic vote must be made with caution.

³ The Democratic and Peoples parties combined nationally on a single candidate for President, Bryan. In Kansas they also presented a single slate of presidential electors. These appeared on the ballot in three different ways in the various counties in Kansas. First, they were listed as Democratic electors, with no Populist electors on the ballot. Second, in other counties they were listed as Populist electors, with no Democratic electors on the ballot. Third, the same names were listed once as Democratic electors and once as Populist electors on the same ballot. These are indicated respectively by an asterisk (*) for Democratic electors, a dagger (†) for Populist electors, and a double-dagger (‡) for counties with the same electors listed for both parties.

In making the percentage and plurality calculations, the Democratic and Populist votes are added together and counted as Democratic votes. The following is the vote for each of these parties in those counties in which the vote has been totaled in the above table:

Allen, 749D, 914P; Anderson, 1266D, 626P; Atchison, 2545D, 423P; Brown, 2606D, 12P; Cheyenne, 106D, 216P; Clark, 89D, 103P; Cloud, 2134D, 509P; Coffey, 2010D, 469P; Comanche, 107D, 65P; Cowley, 3411D, 284P; Crawford, 2978D, 1787P; Douglas, 1871D, 703P; Edwards, 70D, 412P; Elk, 586D, 884P; Ellis, 720D, 335P; Ellsworth, 616D, 383P; Finney, 312D, 45P; Geary, 772D, 403P; Gray, 122D, 11P; Greenwood, 1122D, 946P; Harper, 564D, 771P; Harvey, 988D, 693P; Johnson, 1913D, 549P; Kiowa, 115D, 132P; Leavenworth, 4606D, 59P; Linn, 1380D, 1045P; Meade, 89D, 106P; Miami, 2047D, 765P; Montgomery, 1683D, 1470P; Nemaha, 1911D, 567P; Osborne, 370D, 1038P; Phillips, 190D, 1318P; Pottawatomie, 1463D, 817P; Rawlins, 143D, 486P; Republic, 584D, 1327P; Rooks, 159D, 815P; Rush, 179D, 468P; Russell, 802D, 21P; Shawnee, 5508D, 28P; Sheridan, 114D, 273P; Stafford, 57D, 1282P; Sumner, 1649D, 1401P; and Wabaunsee, 972D, 473P.

⁴ On the national level the Populist party split into two factions, with one group selecting Bryan as their candidate as in 1896 while the other faction nominated Barker. In Kansas the Bryan Populists prevailed and the same situation existed as in 1896, namely three different ways in which the electors were placed on the ballot in different counties. (See footnote 3.) The same procedure has been followed as in 1896. The following is the vote for each of these parties in those counties in which the vote has been totaled in the above table:

¹⁴ The Democratic party was not represented in this district election.

* Alliance party polled second highest vote.

† Alliance party polled highest vote.

¹⁷ The Democratic candidate, Carroll, withdrew because of what was termed "trickery" on the part of the Peoples party. Close, the Peoples party candidate, was entered after an apparent promise of support of the Peoples party for Carroll. (Topeka Daily Capital, Nov. 3, 1892)

¹⁸ The Democratic and Peoples parties joined in the support of a single candidate in this district. For the purpose of computing pluralities and percentages, the vote for the candidate of the combined parties has been considered to be the Democratic party vote. Therefore, comparisons between these statistics and those of a normal Democratic vote must be made with caution.

* Peoples party polled second highest vote.

† Peoples party polled highest vote.

¹⁰ The Democratic and Peoples parties joined in the support of a single candidate. For the purpose of computing pluralities and percentages, the vote for the candidate of the combined parties has been considered to be the Democratic party vote. Therefore, comparisons between these statistics and those of a normal Democratic vote must be made with caution.

²⁰ The Democratic and Peoples parties combined in the support of a single candidate and called themselves the Fusion party in this district. For the purpose of computing pluralities and percentages, the vote for the Fusion candidate has been considered to be the Democratic vote. Therefore, comparisons between these statistics and those of a normal Democratic vote must be made with caution.

²¹ Although the Democratic and Peoples parties did not fuse and adopt a new party identification, they did combine in the support of a single candidate in this district. The vote for the candidate of the combined parties was considered to be Democratic for the purpose of computing pluralities and percentages. Therefore, comparisons between these statistics and those of a normal Democratic vote must be made with caution.

* Peoples party polled second highest vote.

† Peoples party polled highest vote.

²² The Democratic and Peoples parties combined in the support of a single candidate in this district. For the purpose of computing pluralities and percentages the vote for the candidate of the combined parties has been considered to be the Democratic vote in this election. Therefore, comparisons between these statistics and those of a normal Democratic vote must be made with caution.

* Peoples party polled second highest vote.

²³ The Democratic and Peoples parties combined in the support of a single candidate. For the purpose of computing pluralities and percentages the vote for their candidate has been considered to be the Democratic vote in this election. Therefore, comparisons between these statistics and those of a normal Democratic vote must be made with caution.

²⁵ Statistics giving the military vote on a county basis were not available for this election.

* Peoples party polled second highest vote.

† Peoples party polled highest vote.

²⁶ The Democratic and Peoples parties combined in the support of a single candidate. For the purpose of computing pluralities and percentages the vote for their candidate has been considered the Democratic vote in this election. Therefore, comparisons between these statistics and those of a normal Democratic vote must be made with caution.

²⁷ Statistics giving the military vote on a county basis were not available for this election.
